

THE EMPEROR'S
NEW GROOVE

The term Listed Building often conjures up images of stuffy old-world charm. But this lateral conversion couldn't be further from that old adage...

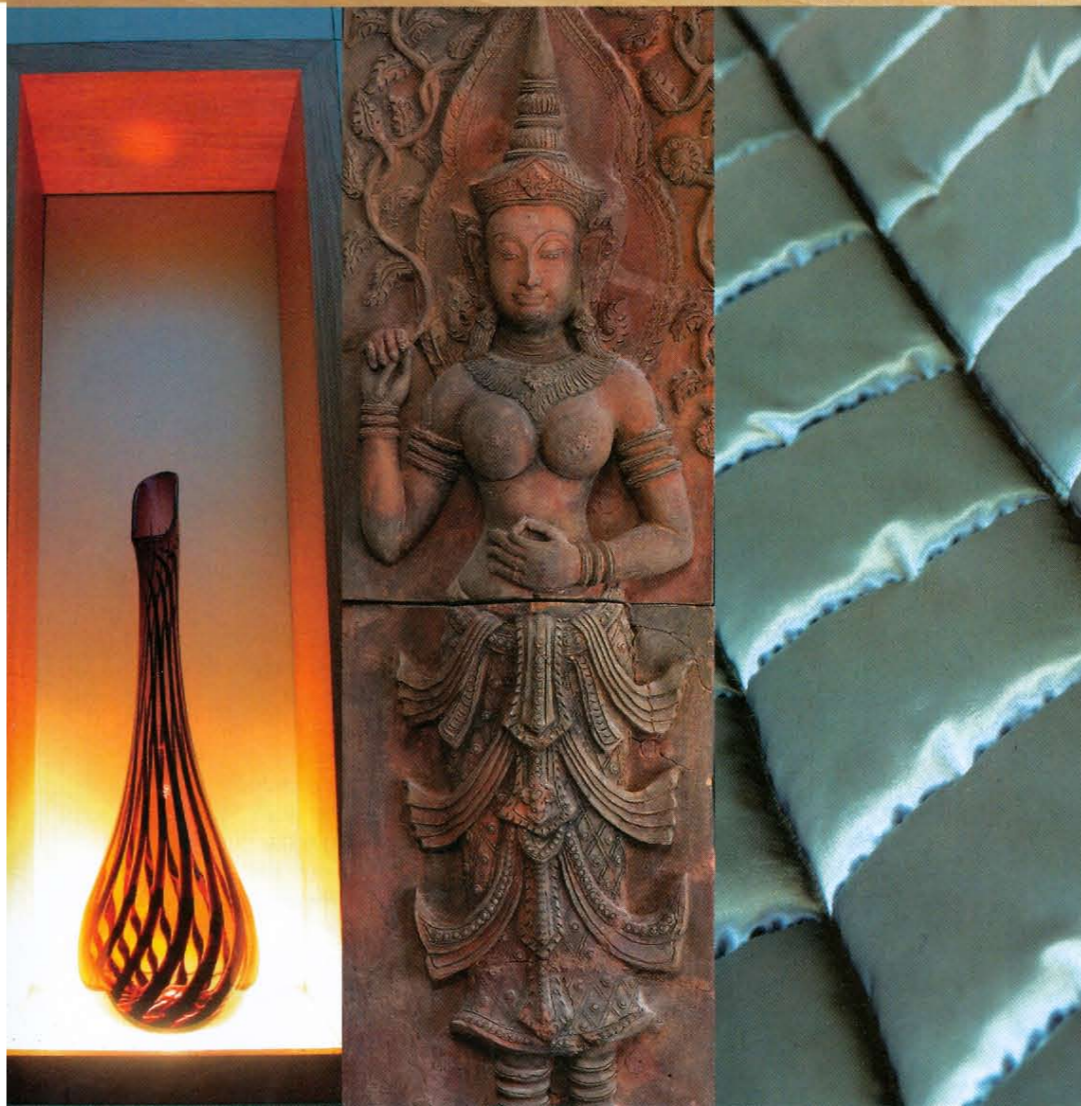

Behind the ordinary looking recessed door you enter a world so luxurious and expertly appointed, you'd be forgiven for thinking you have been transported to another world.

Designed by renowned interior architect and designer Daniel Hopwood, Emperor's Gate is no ordinary two bedroom apartment. This is the stuff of dreams.

Any man-about-town would spend hours using any number of the state-of-the-art gadgets installed in this property. It might be the hidden plasma screen TV and cinema sound or perhaps the built-in Linn music system, with touch pad wall controls. And there would be no need to worry about waking the neighbours because this property is totally soundproofed and has been decibel tested to ensure even the loudest sounds don't stray.

The corridor connecting the main living space is worthy of museum status. Carefully concealed mood lighting sets the tone, while subtle suede wall covering adds texture to the already luxurious 'feel' of the whole apartment. Three alcoves within the corridor offer the ideal opportunity to house precious objects and display them in the ultimate setting.

The master bedroom suite is quite simply stunning - the massive frosted glass headboard feature hides an amazing en suite area with marble tub, toilet and double shower.

Amazing lighting design throughout the property enhances the décor and sets the mood - whatever you may choose it to be.

A second bedroom, further bathroom, as well as a study are all accessed from a central corridor - again designed to give a balance between the massive living area and the more intimate spaces.

As you'd expect, the property also boasts a luxuriously appointed kitchen - complete with a separate champagne fridge - just what everyone needs for those parties...
